About DeVry

DeVry Inc. is one of the largest publicly held, international, higher education companies in North America. DeVry Inc. is also the holding company for DeVry University, Ross University, Chamberlain College of Nursing and Becker Professional Review.

In 1931, Dr. Herman DeVry established a small school in Chicago to prepare students for technical work in electronics, motion pictures, radio and then television. In the 75 years since then, DeVry has worked diligently to gain and maintain its leadership role in North America's post-secondary education arena — along the way bettering the lives of hundreds of thousands of students who trusted DeVry to deliver on its promise of educational excellence.

DeVry and Profiles

DeVry partners with companies to develop employee resources through education, degree advancement, certification and training. DeVry University offers education solutions for corporations looking to advance their current workforce, hire exceptional new employees, tap into current students' resources and make a difference within the community.

In this spirit, DeVry partnered with Profiles in August 2005 to offer internal pre-employment assessments. DeVry utilizes the PXT within a sales organization and the CSP within their human resources, student services and student financial services departments. DeVry is also looking forward to expanding its use of Profiles' tools for succession planning and coaching.

“We are extremely glad to be partnered with Profiles because of their diverse product offerings and a continued commitment to customer service.”
